Outdoor Plus Challenge

from www.clwyd-scouts.org.uk hold the Outdoor Challenge have spent at least 8 nights away as a Scout, 4 of which must be camping Take an active part in a further camp of at least two nights, which should include many of the following: (This list gives an idea of the type and style of the activities that the residential experience should include. Depending on the activity, there may be extra ideas that could be included, which can be discussed in the Troop Forum) lead a group of Scouts in the setting up of a well-organised site that includes sleeping tents, food & equipment stores, fire/stove, kitchen & eating area plan a balanced menu for a short camp show how to use an axe or a saw or both safely lead the cooking of a meal for the group show knowledge of the safety precautions for the correct use of lamps and stoves cook a backwoods meal with the group build a working camp gadget, such as an altar fire, camp oven or gateway to a campsite take a leading role in a pioneering project build a bivouac and sleep in it The Scout will also need to demonstrate knowledge of emergency aid for the outdoors: demonstrate mouth-to-mouth resuscitation using a simulator know how and when to put a patient in the recovery position know how to recognise and treat fractures and severe bleeding know how to use direct pressure to stop bleeding demonstrate an awareness of the dangers of temperature extremes, such as sunstroke, dehydration, heat exhaustion and hypothermia, and know how to prevent and treat them																				